

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

WAR PHOTO PLAY

The military training camps association, which is co-operating with the War Department since the training camps have been taken over by the government, has just issued a one-reel photo play entitled, "Who Leads the National Army?" Its object is to inspire confidence in the men who will lead the soldiers under the draft. As 85% of the men who took the course at officers' training camps and are now in charge of the National Army were college graduates, college presidents will therefore be interested in giving this adequate support. The training camps association requests that you call the attention of your local moving picture houses to this matter and urge them to utilize the film.

For the Program of the Council, see an early issue of this Bulletin